FIELDWORK AWARDS 2007
APPLICATION FORM

Applications are invited for Archaeology Abroad Fieldwork Awards (up to a maximum of £500) which are available to help subscribers meet the costs of joining an excavation project or field school listed in the 2007 edition of Archaeology Abroad or in an Archaeology Abroad Email Update. Awards may be used to help pay for travel, participation or course fees, subsistence or for other appropriate excavation or field school costs.

Please provide the following information, using black ink or typescript:
Please ensure you have read the Notes for Applicants overleaf before completing your application.

1. Name: ........................................................ Date of birth:........................................

Address for correspondence: ........................................................

..........................................................................................................................

..........................................................................................................................

Contact tel: .................................... Email: .................................................................

2. School, college or university, year and details of study, course or degree, or brief details of current employment if not studying. If a graduate, please state which university you attended and the year you were awarded your degree.

..........................................................................................................................

..........................................................................................................................

3. Archaeological project/Field School you wish to take part in:

Name of project: ..........................................................................................................................

Proposed length of stay (with dates): ..........................................................................................

If you have already been accepted on the project please tick box: ☐

4. Attach a statement (500 words max) setting out your reasons for applying. Include:
   • brief details of previous archaeological experience, if any
   • why the site you have chosen interests you
   • a brief project outline and the significance of work already carried out
   • what you think you will gain from participation and why this is important
   • what other sources of financial support you have applied for

5. Signed: ........................................................ Date: .........................................................

6. Send your completed application form, and any enclosures to:
The Honorary Secretary, Archaeology Abroad, 31-34 Gordon Square, London WC1H OPY, UK.
NOTES FOR APPLICANTS

1. All individual subscribers to Archaeology Abroad are eligible to apply for a Fieldwork Award, regardless of age, nationality or level of previous fieldwork experience, if any. Any applicant who is not already a subscriber, or whose subscription has lapsed, may enclose a subscription payment with their application (cheques should be payable to: Archaeology Abroad). Current rates for Individuals are: £20 (UK), £22 (Europe), £24 (World).

2. No more than two applications can be accepted per subscriber in any one year.

3. A separate application form must be submitted for each project (additional application forms may be obtained from Archaeology Abroad).

4. An Award can be used only for the excavation or field school for which it has been given.

5. There is no closing date for applications, but applicants should submit their completed form(s) at least four weeks before the start of their proposed fieldwork in order to allow sufficient time for judging and processing.

6. Judging is undertaken by a panel of experts, normally within a two-three week period following receipt of an application. Successful applicants are notified as soon as possible and payment made in advance of departure. In certain circumstances, it may be possible to arrange for payment may be made retrospectively.

7. It is a condition of receiving a Fieldwork Award, that successful applicants submit a report about their experiences following return from their chosen fieldwork, which may be published in a future issue of Archaeology Abroad. Guidance notes for the preparation of Fieldwork Award Reports are sent to successful applicants at the time their award is made. Any recipient who fails to submit a report, may be required to repay part or all of their award.

8. If for any reason a Fieldwork Award recipient is unable to take up his/her place on the project for which they have received an award, they will be asked to repay it to Archaeology Abroad.

9. Award recipients are urged to take out adequate insurance cover, in particular against loss of flight or other travel costs, in the event of their being unable to join the project for any reason, including project cancellation.

10. Successful applicants may not reapply for a period of 12 months.

For additional application forms or further information contact:

Wendy Rix Morton
Honorary Secretary & Editor
Archaeology Abroad
31-34 Gordon Square
London WC1H OPY

Tel/Fax: +44 (0)20-8537-0849
Email: arch.abroad@ucl.ac.uk
Web: www.britarch.ac.uk/archabroad

Info/Notes: 2007